Summary: Short instances where Koushi is called "mom" by his own teammates, and doesn't know how to respond.

Mom?

A/N: I got this urge to type something, but I couldn't bring myself to type up the ones I ACTUALLY wanted to do, and I planned on doing this one for a while anyways. That whole sentence probably did not make any sense, but I'm too lazy to go back and change it, so meh.

Brought up in a conversation with Spring Zephyr, whose name I always feel like I'm misspelling.

>"Mom?"

It had all started when Hinata uttered that one word while tugging on his jersey.

Honestly, Koushi wasn't sure how, exactly, he was supposed to react to being called "mom". And in front of all their teammates, at that.

The first reactions came from Tanaka and Nishinoya, who simultaneously burst out laughing. This was followed by Tsukishima's smirk and Yamaguchi covering his mouth to cover a grin. Even Daichi and Asahi were smiling, obviously amused by the situation their friend was in. Shortly after the laughter started, Hinata had realized his mistake, turned an adorable shade of red, sputtering out apologies.

It ended with Kageyama hitting Hinata on the head, yelling something about how "Sugawara-san isn't your mother!" and stomping off back to the court.

He didn't think much of it. The first time it happened. The second time was a little less amusing.

He would have been happier if Hinata hadn't made the same mistake every day for a week after.

Every. Single. Time.

>"Mama?"

The second one to do it was, unsurprisingly, Kageyama. Koushi always figured that if Hinata did something stupid, Kageyama would probably do it too sometime in the future.

Well, it wasn't the level of 'stupid' he'd been expecting(something like falling out of a tree or tripping on the nets), so that was probably a good thing.

"Pfft- Haha- You called him Mama! Do you do that at home too?"

"S-Shut up! There's nothing wrong with how I call my mom!"

Hinata's outburst along with Tanaka and Nishinoya's laughter and Kageyama's response did nothing to repress his annoyance, and after a shout to get back to practice, he realized - much to his horror - that this might become a thing.

>He was grateful when Yamaguchi had caught himself in the middle of calling him 'mother' or he would have cracked.

The next one to do it, however, was Tsukishima. Koushi had a sneaking suspicion he did it on purpose, too, by the smirk the younger boy was wearing after he'd(rather calmly) asked him a question about their signs.

Tanaka and Nishinoya were doing it now, too. He was sure they were doing it on purpose, and no amount of, "No, Suga-san, it was an accident" would convince him otherwise.

Even Asahi had let it slip at one point, though the smile Koushi gave him afterwards guaranteed he'd never be doing it again.

It was going to spread around the school, he just knew it.

>"So, mom, did you finish your winter homework?"

The papers in his hands crumpled at the teasing tone Daichi was using, the pen ink smearing across his fingers. He turned to his friend, lips set into a firm line, glaring at the smirk he was met with.

"Daichi."

"Yeah?"

"One more time. I dare you."

If anyone asked later, he'd say he was chasing Daichi through the hallway because he ruined his homework.

A/N: Spell check sucks.

I wanted to throw Shimizu and Yachi in here, but by the time I realized I forgot about them I couldn't find a place that wouldn't mess up the flow. This is probably a lot shorter than I thought it'd be, but since it's nearly 1 am, I thought I'd add scenes later if I can think of any.

Honestly, this probably would have gone better if I wasn't watching too much DMMd. It's addicting.
